

Biotrack represents Electronic Manufacturing in UK's annual Parliamentary Review

Biotrack has been selected to appear in the 2015/16 Electronics Manufacturing edition of The Parliamentary Review. The main aim of The Review is to showcase best practice as a learning tool to the public and private sector, highlighting twelve organisations that are outstanding in their field.

Managing Director, Brian Cresswell, commented "We feel honoured that Biotrack has been recognised in this year's Parliamentary Review alongside a selection of prestigious UK electronics manufacturers. We've made great strides since moving into new premises last year, including hiring 7 new employees and producing a clutch of exciting new GPS tags for birds. We hope that being selected for the Parliamentary Review will help us make new contacts and raise our profile as a highly innovative electronics manufacturer that contributes to the understanding and conservation of the natural world".

Alongside pieces from the selected representatives and an introduction from the Chancellor, it contains a look back at the year at Westminster and in Manufacturing, with the political commentary written by Mark D'Arcy (BBC's Parliamentary Correspondent). The document is sent out to tens of thousands of leading policymakers and manufacturing executives.

Director of The Parliamentary Review, Daniel Yossman, said: "It's been an utter privilege to work with a range of organisations from across the country in this year's Review. Without their input, our aims of spreading expert knowledge and raising standards simply would not be achievable. They'll be a hard act to follow and next year's organisations will have to be on the top of their game to meet the challenge."

Editor of The Parliamentary Review, The Rt Hon David Curry, said: "Each of the representatives brings something very different to the table, while at the same time capitalising on the collective wisdom of their industry. There may be choppy waters ahead but organisations across the country would be well-advised to keep an eye on the representatives in this year's Review when deciding how to set their sails."

Chancellor of the Exchequer, The Rt Hon Philip Hammond, concurred: "The message we take to the world is this: we are the same outward-looking, globally-minded, big-thinking country we have always been – and we remain very firmly open for business."
